Infections

EXPERIENCE emphasizes over and over again that even small abrasions on the skin should not be neglected. Many a case of blood poisoning has resulted from a blister on the heel from tennis or a small splinter in the finger tip. Any cut or scratch should be washed gently with cotton dipped in alcohol and when dry painted with iodine or mercurchrome. If there is any bleeding bandage with sterile gauze.

What two places on the body were the most dangerous for skin infections? The answer is finger tip infections and upper lip and nose infections.

The fingers are well supplied with lymphatics and these carry infection up the arm into the blood stream—so-called blood poisoning. Its path may be seen in the little red lines under the skin from the point of infection to the arm pit. The lymph glands—kernels—in the armpit or above the elbow may be enlarged—also an indication of spreading infection.

The finger tip is a dangerous site for infection also because of its anatomy. Along the finger under the skin and above the bone and going in to the palm of the hand are clotted sacs of pus—abscesses for the time being of the muscles which perform the fine movements of the fingers. These are easily infected and the infection is a crippling and a disability.

Other forms of infection of the fingers include "fingers" which are extensions of pus to the periosteum of the bone. To avoid all the dangers treat every injury and scratch on the skin of the finger especially finger tips with a preservative which means prompt sterilization and dressing.

The upper lip infections are particularly dangerous because the blood supply of that region leads directly to the great blood sinuses of the brain and infection may travel by this path causing septicemia or an almost always fatal condition. Such infections should be treated by a physician and above all should not be nibbled or touched or handled.

Casual Slaughters

By VIRGINIA HANSON

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (U.P.)—A man who was a member of the "Casual Slaughter" club, which was organized by a group of men in Springfield, Ill., has been arrested by the local police.

CHAPTER 40 "Lover's Return"

THE corridor was not quite dark. A dim light had been left burning on the cross hall that led to the lounge and a small faint light over the side door let in a little light from the street. To my left, not more than a dozen steps away was the door to my room. Directly opposite Felicia's door and mine were those of two empty guest rooms which I knew were kept locked when they were not in use. To my right beyond Felicia's room and beyond the cross hall stretched a double row of cryptically closed doors. Now that Sandra and Jeff were gone only one other room in this wing was occupied, and that by the chaplain. Gerald was upstairs somewhere among the bachelors. There was no one in sight in either direction. Nevertheless that strange chill persisted. I told myself that I had imagined the creaks and rattles the click of the door latch. I had to get that behind me, and repeated my maneuver in the bedroom. I looked under the diamond bed in the bathroom. There was no one in the suite. Feeling considerably better I went back into the sitting room closed and locked the door and switched off the overhead light. There was a small shaded lamp on the table I had turned that on instead after pulling down the thick blinds of the sitting-room windows. Then I closed the door to the dark bedroom and reasonably safe from interruption unlocked the wardrobe case and got out the manuscript. It was just where I had left it. The seal still unbroken. I carried it over to the table sat down and prepared to open it. I had thought better of my resolution to return with it to Felicia's room. I did not want her waking up and coming in on me with her everlasting curiosity. For the matter of that how did I know I dared trust her? I was in no good mood to trust anyone. And suddenly I saw Sandra's notebook. It was lying on the table just beyond the lamp. On top of some magazines I intended to give the orderly where Jeff had found it where I had looked for it in vain when I returned from the hospital. If it had been a coiled snake I could not have felt a more fascinated horror. Then someone had been in this room since I left it! I forced myself to reach for it but as I drew it toward me I felt a sudden consciousness of the spot between my shoulder blades that acts in a third eye. I now glanced nervously behind me but there was nothing there—nothing but the closed door to the bedroom which I had just thoroughly searched. What was this? I muttered crossly. But I reflected that if human beings are cars someone would long ago have consigned them to the form of wreckage. Rear view—Why not contrive a little of my own?

There was a fair sized mirror on the inner side of the flag of my pocketbook—one of those oval-shaped affairs I turned it inside out and propped it against the lamp so that the mirror reflected the knob of the bedroom door. I still have that pocketbook. I expect to will it to my grandchildren. If any for it they ever have any existence they will owe it to that mirror. Without it I would have lost my life that night. For the moment it gave me a false sense of security. I opened the notebook and saw that it contained about three pages of competent Gregg shorthand and a scintilla of the little I could remember from a high school course set myself to decipher it. A few lines were enough to tell me that this was merely the dictation I had given Sandra on Tuesday. I began to puzzle out a phrase here and there turning the pages reassessing myself that there was nothing more. Nothing more? I turned the last page and saw detached from the rest of the text a line of four characters. I puzzled over them for a moment. The first was the little curved stroke that denotes the hard sound of the letter c—kub or can. The second character seemed to be red. Can red—that did make sense. No wall—can read I went on to last two, which were more complex, with the two little strokes under each that mean capitals. A title with that as a clue I deciphered them. Lover's Return! The manuscript she had helped me copy. I was right! Can read—no! What a fool I was! Kay read Lover's Return! My fingers trembling with ailing most unbearable eagerness I tore open the manila envelope and drew out the eighteen or twenty typed pages. I started to read. I don't know what I expected to find—underlined words, interlineations. I have decided. There was nothing. This was just the story I had written, the pages I had copied and proof-read myself. Sandra had done the last six or eight pages. I flipped the manuscript over chose a page at random scanned the lines. But I had proofread these pages, too as she typed them. What? And then I remembered the letter. About the middle it starts to go haywire. I fumbled the pages apart grabbed a section out of the middle and began to read. Page ten. —what any of you say, I just can't go on without him. He's why don't you understand? He's part of my life! That was no good. My own deathless lines. I had started to turn the page when I was struck by the strangely solid look of the lower half of the sheet. No dialogue. Paragraphs that begged to be shorted. Why that would be a solid block in print. Maribel flung back her silken curls and stared up at him tragically. It's no use Alfred. Sit down and I will tell you my story. What was this? Maribel had taken curls all right like proper pulp heroines and maybe she had a past, too. But this was no way to introduce either Maribel had certainly gone haywire. With more eagerness than any shopgirl I began to revel in Maribel's past. There is an imposter here and I am the only one who knows it. In the beginning I was assured that I would only do harm by exposing the imposture and I agreed to keep silent for a price I saw and still see no reason why I should not be paid for a service rendered. I needed the money—just for myself alone but for the man I loved. There is nothing quite so bitter as to be denied love because of poverty—and that poverty caused by a callous world's rejection of genius. And then he was killed. I still think my husband killed him and I mean him to suffer for it. But my own future was at stake too. I had to decide between immediate revenge or security first. I've never been anybody or had anything but the charity of strangers. When the only person I loved lay brutally murdered I cared about nothing but power money the means to revenge myself on a world that has shown me no kindness. But something was said about spies which has set me thinking. And I have not yet been paid for my silence. I intend to give the imposter one more chance but to safeguard myself from one who may be a spy I have decided to record what I know. A shiver like a tickling feather had started at the nape of my neck and was zigzagging down my backbone. My fingers fumbled as I tried to flip the page and something I will never know what drew my eyes to the mirror.

Editor—

American youth wants to learn to earn, to live by that earning, to enjoy life in its desired fashion, to work honestly for an honest wage to be taught and practice sincerely to know the truth about things but this training should not be dealt out in a mimeograph fashion. Nothing could be more brutal than if on arriving at the end of a stage of learning he is told that he must spend one year or more goose-stepping and obeying orders given by a martinet instructor. American youth inherits the quality of initiative. Left to his own devices he takes the drum apart to see what makes the noise. He studies away from the dictation of the classroom instructor and secures his answer by honest endeavor. Some of the American youth willingly enter the service of the armed forces. This is his choice. In its fashion he sees and enjoys life he learns so that at the end of the prescribed service he returns to civil life better equipped.

Enlistment when urged in the American way is by offering the things which will keep Americans in the American frame of mind and teach them that while they are not herded like cattle branded and ready at the whim of a dictator for war or peace. South American tempers often burst into flame. They have neighborhood differences the U. S. A. will have to police those regions now. Fight the bony man. All too soon American youth will see service outside the boundaries of his country.

There may also be a little of a bell-shaped character taking self-restraint, patience and for the sake of Amability and strategy will succeed in such strained relations rather than strife, recklessness and tumult. A sign recommending compromise and finesse may help break down resistance and hostility. All possessions should be definitely safeguarded.

3 MORROW CO. DEMOCRATS QUIT UNDER NEW ACT

Special to The Star

VT. GILEAD Aug. 9.—Three members of the Morrow county Democratic central committee have resigned because of the law which forbids AAA workers from participating in any political activity.

The resignations of Irvin Bennett of Bennington, Herbert Cole of Bennington and Vaughn Maxwell of Cardington were accepted by the committee.

Appointed to succeed them were Vard Cook of Cardington, Harmon Shipman of Franklin and John Strawn of Marengo.

The knob of the bedroom door was slowly turning. Incredulous I stared at the mirror. I had searched that room. There couldn't be anyone there! I kept on watching the turning knob for an instant of frayed helplessness. Then a picture flashed into my mind—Jeff disappearing into the bedroom. Felicia at the corridor door. I heard again the little sounds of Jeff departing by the bedroom window. The screen. I had forgotten to latch that bedroom screen.

WHEAT INSURANCE DEADLINE AUG. 31

Farmers Urged To Prepare Applications Immediately.

Wheat growers in Marion county were urged today by C. P. Harper, chairman of the County Wheat Insurance Committee, to get their applications for all risk crop insurance on file at the county office in view of the fact no applications for insurance will be accepted after Aug. 31. Applications will have to be on file and premiums paid four weeks earlier than last year.

The Aug. 31 deadline applies to wheat growers in Marion county but to all winter-wheat growers in every state, Mr. Harper said. It is the last possible date on which growers can get wheat insurance on their 1941 crop under the federal crop insurance program premiums must be paid before the crop is insured is seeded. The county wheat insurance program has been in effect since each grower at the time of application will have some indication of the yield the crop average may produce.

This is the third successive year that wheat insurance has been in effect in 1939 the 171 growers in Marion county who insured their crops against all unfavorable hazards collected 3,742 bushels of wheat. A total of 364 growers insured their 1940 crop.

"In the past," Harper said, "a

Let's Think This Over....

Why Does a Company Advertise Its Products?

A manufacturer who wished to contact ALL of the people in city, town and country, in person, to tell about his product would find a tremendous task ahead of him. Then with increased volume, as a result of nation-wide acceptance, the price per product dropped, thus proving its practicability. Look for and

Feller Wins 19th But Cleveland Splits Pair To Stay in Second Place

Tribe Misses Chance To Grab Lead by Losing Nightcap, 2-1.

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

It is as evident as the headlines in your newspaper today that Bobby Feller can't pitch the Cleveland Indians into the American league championship singlehanded—or even with two hands.

The famous fireballer stands out as the best hurler in baseball, with 19 victories already in the bag, but the Indians are in second place just the same and unless they can figure out something else, they may stay there.

Reds End Famine As Walters Stops Cubs for 16th Win

Cleveland had a chance to take over the lead yesterday. The Detroit Tigers were idle and the Tribe was down for a double header with the seventh place St. Louis Browns.

Feller took care of winning the first game 7-4 pitching shutout ball for five innings until his teammates got him a working margin. Then came the nightcap and even with Johnny Humphries pitching three hit ball the Tribe couldn't capture the crucial game. The score was 2-1.

The Boston Red Sox reinforced their third place position by defeating the New York Yankees again 6-5. Jimmy Fox hit his 26th homer and Dom D'Amico made four hits in five trips.

The Philadelphia Athletics beat the Washington Senators 6-4 in 10 innings. Frank Hayes delivered a pinch double to tie the score in the ninth and in the tenth a single and two more doubles provided the winning margin.

An even more breath taking spectacle was the Brooklyn Dodgers 6-1 triumph over the New York Giants on Dole's Camillo's 12th home run in the 12th inning. Two were out and two were on at the time.

Bucky Walters checked the skid of the Cincinnati Reds by scattering nine hits so effectively that he shut out the Chicago Cubs after the first inning and won 3-1. In the only other National league game the Boston Bees proved the Phillies into their ninth consecutive defeat 6-2.

Monday's scheduled wrestling show is a dynamite-packed card with explosive possibilities in each of the three scraps comprising the bill-of-fare.
